FOREWORD

Through the ready cooperation of labor union officials with the offices of the employment service, this compilation of craft and industrial union locals and officers has been made possible. As is always the case with a directory of persons, titles and addresses, the listing is subject to early and frequent changes. No guaranty can be given as to the accuracy or completeness of the production.

Distribution of this directory pamphlet is primarily to the employment service offices and to the key officials of the local unions listed, secondarily to state departments, and to colleges, libraries, and reference institutions in and out of the state, and finally on request to any person who wishes a copy within the limits of available supply.

There is much in common between the labor union membership in the state and this commission. The labor unions represent a substantial segment of Montana wage-earners. The commission, through its divisions of employment service and of unemployment insurance, occupies a strategic position in the labor market for which those wage-earners are the indispensable supply.

A basic objective of all labor unions, and of the commission as the labor market stabilization representative of state and federal governments, is full and regular employment for all persons who desire such employment. All society is concerned with that same objective. Continuity of suitable employment is a characteristic of the American way of life. In promoting efforts in Montana to attain such a desirable end the labor unions, this commission, and the forward looking forces of today's civilization are working shoulder to shoulder.

Employment service and unemployment insurance facilities are dedicated to all elements of the public — union members, non-union workers, employers, and individuals — on a basis of equality and unselfishness, as provided in the laws under which the commission operates.

Index and Directory of EMPLOYMENT SERVICE OFFICES

Listings in this directory are grouped according to the location of offices of the state employment service, arranged in the alphabetical sequence of the cities in which those offices are situated.

Individual organizations within an office area are in turn arranged alphabetically according to the name of the organization, with subdivisions where more than one city in the office area has active labor organizations.

For brevity, and convenience of reference, the popular name of each union is used, and apology is hereby tendered those organizations possessing lengthy titles which have been reduced or skeletonized in the move for brevity.

In general, the directory attempts to provide the name and number of the labor organization, the name, address and telephone number of the president and business agent or secretary, the date and place of meeting.

Street addresses of employment service offices, and area served by each, are indicated in the index.
